1. The Third estate was the largest Community in French society. Still they were denied the right to political representation, even though they were subjected to the full weight of taxation.
2. The vast majority of people hence became unhappy and, as a result, caused the French Revolution.
3. The sociopolitical system in France was thought to be the root of the problems.
4. In the end, the dissatisfied segment of society [Third estate] began retaliating against the Ruling class, which sparked the French Revolution in 1789.
